UNIVERSITY OF THE WITWATERSRAND

INSTRUCTIONAL DESIGN

ONLINE SHORT COURSE

Enter the innovative industry of instructional design.
ABOUT THIS COURSE

Instructional design concerns the development and curation of knowledge and educational material into frameworks suitable for online learning. The Wits Instructional Design short course introduces key pedagogical theories and instructional models, as well as the latest practices in e-learning and educational technology. Over 8 weeks, you'll develop interpersonal, written, and visual communication skills necessary for proficiency in the field of instructional design. You will gain a working knowledge of educational technology, including authoring tools and learning management systems, and will emerge with a portfolio of evidence tailored to your own educational or training context.

Requires approx. 7-10 hours per week, self-paced

MEET THE HEAD TUTOR
CARIEN AALBERS
Head of Learning Design, Hubble Studios

Carien has worked in online education for a number of years and across a range of industries. She is currently Head of Learning Design at Hubble Studios, an e-learning agency based in Cape Town. She has been involved in designing corporate learning programmes for clients ranging from financial services to the retail sector and the hospitality industry, for audiences of up to 20 000 learners.

Carien is passionate about well-designed, applied learning experiences that delight learners and equip them with the skills and knowledge to improve their performance.
HOW THIS COURSE WILL HELP YOU DIFFERENTIATE YOURSELF:

- You’re an educator looking to broaden your knowledge and experience in order to move into a new area of the education field.
- You work as an educator and are interested in lesson and curriculum planning for digital platforms to better facilitate your students’ learning experiences.
- You currently work as a writer or copy-editor and want to use your writing abilities to make a career move into the field of instructional design.
- You aspire to work in the education sector and want to gain a firmer grasp on the use of educational technology in the digital space so you can broaden your career opportunities.
- You’ve got the skills, but need a formal qualification that recognises them, to further your instructional design career.
- You’re an e-learning specialist, online facilitator or corporate trainer and see this course as an opportunity to make your portfolio more impressive and take on more responsibility.

AFTER COMPLETING THIS COURSE YOU’LL BE CONFIDENT IN YOUR ABILITY TO:

- Choose appropriate instructional design models according to organisational constraints and priorities.
- Create an effective design and delivery plan that maps the proposed structure, content, and support model of a course, workshop, or lesson.
- Use sound pedagogical knowledge to develop written and visual content as well as assessment material.
- Confidently navigate different learning management systems and platforms, and assess them in terms of their suitability to various contexts.
